CITY INTELLIGENCE.

THE SEASON.

We have passed through the summer, with its heat and its dust, and are fast drifting into the shivering atmosphere of winter. The signing wind no longer pro-duces a grateful, cooling sensation, but is invigorating, and ore long will become chilling in its effects. These are the saddest days of the year. The sun is not so fre quently visible now as it has been; and when it shines its brightest, and the sky is clearest, the warming effect (its mys is counteracted by the more powerful blasts of old Boreas. The green grass is withering and dying, and the graceful foliage of the trees is falling. Nature is losing that holiday appearance which it wears in the mildest senson, and preparing for a wintry aspect. Each season brings its pleasure and its pain; but though there are many who look forward to the winter with visions of gayety, and the cosy comfortable fireside enrisions of gayety, and the cosy comortains messale enjoyments of home, there are others to whom the prospect is one of pinching want, of cold and hunger to be endured. In each season, too, there are opportunities for the prastice of benevolence; but the approaching inclement season appeals most forcibly for the exercise of this virtue. The world has been called cold and unfeeling. This is true to a great extent; but yet there are few who mingle in the daily scenes of life who have not hearts to feel and the will to relieve the necessities of their suffering fellow-men. The reason why men are called unfeeling is because they are often imposed upon by those who really will do nothing to help themselves. If there were no impostors, there would be fewer of those who need assistance that would be permitted to go with-

But, if the weather is blustering without, our streets present a scene of activity that is unknown during the intense heat of the summer. Men are seen hurrying from place to place, and no longer sannter along with a slow and lazy pace, and no longer use their pocket-handker chiefs to wipe the perspiration from their foreheads Whatever is done now is done quickly, and the change may be ascribed to the effects of the weather. Overcoats, which have long been out of fashion, are now sought for; and shawls, the most unfashionable garment that a genand shawls, the most unasmonator garment that a gen-tleman can now wear, are still frequently seen upon our avenue. Fires are breaking out in almost every house, and, still, people abroad may wonder that the building are not consumed and the insurance companies called upon for their value. Our hotels, too, are looking up. Most of them have been repainted and rejuvenated, in side and out. An extra number of servants have been employed, and the landlords themselves are more than usually polite and attentive, and in more than their usual flow of good spirits. The winter throng of guests are making their appearance, and Congress looms up in the distance. It is only whilst the legislators of this great nation are here that the landlord is himself, and dispense his hospitalities with his most winning grace.

were ordered to be paid.

A bill was also presented from T. J. Mugruder, for fifty dollars, boing for one quarter's salary as treasurer of the Board of Trustees of the Public Schools from July 1st to October 1st, 1857—the former Mayor having refused to pay it, on the ground that by a decision of the Circuit Court the election of that officer was illegally conducted.

On motion by Mr. Brandr, the bill was rejected, and the secretary was directed to notify Mr. Magrader that the Board decline to overrule the decision of the former Mayor. will therefore be obliged to seek relief through th

A committee was appointed to exame the treasurer's accounts, consisting of Messrs. Van Santvoord, Chapin, Wilson, and Brandt.

Mr. Wilson submitted the following preamble and reschibled was admitted.

Mr. Wilson submitted the following preamble and resolution; which were adopted:

The Prisident pro tem. left the chair, which was taken by Dr. Walsh. Mr. Brander then moved that the board tender to Colonel Randolph, their president pro tem., their sincere thanks for the able and dignified manner in which he has presided over the board during the past year; and express their hope that in the reorganization of the board next year they may again see him occupy the same position, whether the other members now belonging to the board be there or not.

The resolution was unanimously adopted.

Colonel Randolph then returned thanks for this compliment in a few pertinent and appropriate remarks; after which the board adjourned.

THE THEATRE.—The management, ever desirous to minister to the wants of the public, have announced for the present week a new candidate for popular favor, in the person of Miss J. Coombs, who has recently concluded a very successful star engagement at Niblo's Garden, New York. The New York Herald describes her as being "gifted with a very handsome presence, a fine voice entirely under her control, and a grace, case, and dignity quite remarkable in an actress yet in her noviciate. She was very warmly applauded, and deservedly so, last night. Her previous efforts in tragedy have gone far to establish her reputation in that line; but we would venture to predict, judging from her performance last night, that she will make her mark in comedy as well. We understand that she is a pupil of Clara Fisher, (Mrs. Maeder,) and, considering that she is only nineteen years of age, and just commencing her career, we may safely ex-pect that she will reflect no discredit on her teacher. Her performance foreshadows a very brilliant career as an

Miss Coombs will appear to-morrow night as "Constance," in Sheridan Knowles's beautiful comedy, "The Love Chase;" and the comedicita "Our Wife" will close the entertainment, in which Mr. J. M. Dawson and Mrs. C. W. Tayleure will sustain the prominent parts.

DISAPPRARANCE OF MR. ETPTREDGE.-The Boston papers mention the sudden disappearance of Mr. John Etheredge, formerly chief clerk in the Navy Department. He left his home on Monday, the 13th instant, and has not since been heard from. We learn from private let-ters received here that he left his watch and other valuables in his room, and his friends are apprehensive that he has committed suicide. It is not stated that he exhibited any signs of abberration of intellect, though it is known that his disposition was retiring, preferring his own company to seeking for the association of others. Any in-formation concerning him should be addressed to M. A. Etheredge, 254 Tremont street, Boston.

THE PYNE AND HARRISON OPERA COMPANY, whose perormances at the old National Theatre will be remembered with lively satisfaction by most of our city readers, having been very successful last season at the Lyceum in ondon, have taken the Drury I me Theatre, which was to have opened with the English version of Flotow's opera of "Martha," on the 16th instant. An efficient rchestra has been engaged; and, in addition to other novelties, it was proposed to bring out a new opera, by Mr. George Bristow, of New York, entitled "Rip Van Winkle," which has been performed in this country with COLD WEALDER.—The sudden fall of the mercury warns as to make preparation for winter. Woodward's stoves, of which he has a large and excellent assortment, are in great demand, particularly "The Arbiter," which con-sumes its own smoke and gas, and is therefore one of the most economical stoves ever invented.
